Rock Art and Archaeology Fieldwork & Fieldschool 16 July · 6 August 2015

The Footsteps of Man Archaeological Cooperative Society is based in Valcamonica, an Alpine valley in Northern Italy, where rock art constitutes an archaeological, artistic, ethnographic and historical patrimony of inestimable value (today incorporated onto the UNESCO World Heritage List). In collaboration with the Catholic University of Brescia, the Footsteps of Man Archaeological Cooperative Society organizes its annual archaeology fieldschool at Paspardo, one of the major area where engravings are concentrated.

This area gives great opportunity to those interested (archaeologists and scholars, students and enthusiasts) to assist in the research and to learn how to study rock art.

The project participants will learn to survey, clean, photograph, record and catalogue the rock engravings at sites around Paspardo, including Vite, Castello, La Bosca.
